

In your groups, make an outline of the constitution you examined in an organized, clear format. One possibility would look like this:

- I. Preamble
- II. Officer Duties
 - A. SA President
 - B. SA Executive Vice President
 - C. SA Social Vice President
 - D. SA Religious Vice President
 - E. Public Relations
 - F. Officer-at-Large
- III. Qualifications for Office
 - A. GPA
 - B. Class Standing
- IV. Election Process
 - A. Declaring Candidacy
 - B. Voting
- .
- .
- .

Write your outline on the board. Once each group has done this, look at the other groups' outlines and discuss these questions, designating one person in your group to record the answers:

Are there any sections that appear in every constitution?

What sections or features appear in only one or two of the constitutions?

Considering the outlines, are there any new "Things a good SA constitution should do" that we should add to our list?

Structurally, in the way the sections are divided and ordered, what do the constitutions have in common? What is different about them?

Do you think that one of the constitutions is organized in a more effective way than the others? Why?